News / Airlines

Riyadh Air is preparing for the arrival of its first Boeing 787-9 Dreamliner. The leased aircraft, painted in the airline's resplendent pearl livery and set to be used as a technical spare and for training purposes, will be unveiled at the airline's home airport at Riyadh's King Khalid International Airport.

With the airline's highly anticipated cabin interiors set to be revealed soon, this aircraft will not feature the new cabin but does have a high-specification interior to meet guests' expectations when flying with a world-class modern airline.

This aircraft is separate from the original Boeing 787-9 Dreamliner aircraft order of 72 aircraft and will be utilized over the coming months for training purposes. It will continue the process of Air Operator Certificate with the General Authority of Civil Aviation before operating as Riyadh Air's technical spare to allow operations to commence later in 2025.
