FOUR BELL 407GXIS ARE JOINING LIFE FLIGHT NETWORK HELICOPTER AIR AMBULANCE FLEET

News / Business aviation, Manufacturer

Life Flight Network, the largest not-for-profit air medical program in the country, will add four additional Bell 407GXi helicopters. These aircraft will bring Life Flight Network current operating fleetto seven Bell 407GXis, remaining the largest air medical operator of the Bell 407GXi in the Pacific Northwest and Intermountain West.

Lane Evans, director, North America Sales, commented: “Life Flight Network has continued to see the value and performance the Bell 407 platform hasprovided in the last several years. The additional four Bell 407GXis with certified IFR (Instrument Flight Rules) capabilities will grow their state-of-the-art transport resources, allowing Life Flight Network to further increase community access to industry leading critical care transport.”

Life Flight Network’s total Bell fleet will consist of four Bell 429s and 25 Bell 407GX-series helicopters, providing critical care transportation to those in need. The organization continues to be a leader in the air ambulance industry, with 27 rotor-wing bases, 10 fixed-wing bases, and two
