refurbishment and dual basing in Cancun and Toluca allow it to serve two of the region's busiest business aviation corridors. Also operating from Toluca and Fort Lauderdale, the Hawker 750 offers midsize capability with significant external baggage capacity, supporting travelers moving with equipment or multi-day luggage. Its cabin layout ensures comfort on both short and medium-length routes.

Learjet 45XR completes the latest additions, providing the speed and efficiency that have made the model a mainstay in light-to-midsize operations. With bases in San José del Cabo and San Diego, it supports high-demand West Coast, Baja California, and extended regional routes.

Supporting brokers and partners

Jet Luxe continues to apply structured, transparent operating processes across its commercial management division, focusing on clear communication, coordinated scheduling, and reliable trip execution. The framework supports on-demand charter, supplemental lift, and complex itineraries that require consistent performance and attention to detail.

Madrid emphasized that the company's goal is operational clarity. "Brokers need information they can trust and aircraft that perform exactly as promised," he said. "Our systems and our team are designed to support that expectation every day."

Strengthened presence across Florida & LATAM

With additional aircraft positioned across Florida, Mexico, and key points in Latin America, Jet Luxe increases its ability to serve major charter corridors, including U.S.-LATAM business travel, Caribbean leisure routes, and Mexico's expanding corporate aviation sector. The distribution of the fleet enables more efficient routing and shorter response times, especially during peak travel seasons.
